The first thing I will say is that I can certainly provide you with my support.

This is something that I found really helpful when I got started as just knowing that someone was there willing to help me out answering to some of my question made the whole difference. I know the feeling of starting a whole new journey and how scary can be to do it without the support of someone that went through the same journey.

I will be happy to schedule a 1 & 1 call directly with you in order to clarify any question you may have, plus you will receive all the support you need from the SFM team as they have a dedicated team available 24/7 to clarify all of the questions from the members.

I also found that getting into the FB group and connecting with the community is the best way to gather all the information that you may be looking for. You only need to request to join the SFM FB private group and start connecting with all of the other members.
